

Operation Northwoods was a plan drawn up in 1962 by the US military to justify an invasion of Cuba. The plan described how it would murder Cubans in the US, launch terror campaigns in several US cities, sink civilian aircraft and US ships. The document also describes how lists of the dead in US newspapers will create a spirit of aid in the country. The plan was not just an imagined war scenario. It had been approved for implementation by all but Defense Secretary Robert McNamara. All that was missing was approval for a series of terrorist attacks against the country's own population. Fortunately, this never happened.

Example 5: THE TONKIN BLUFF

In the summer of 1964, South Vietnamese soldiers led by US General Westmoreland attacked some islands off the coast of North Vietnam. On 3 August, the US announced that North Vietnamese gunboats had fired on US warships off the coast. In 1993, US official sources confirmed that the Gulf of Tonkin incident had been fabricated by the US. But then-President Johnson and the elite were given the cover they needed to launch a full-scale war effort. Without further investigation, Congress passed a resolution authorizing President Lyndon Johnson to take all necessary measures to "defend the United States". The 20,000 military advisers were supplemented by combat troops, and a massive bombing campaign was launched in the slaughter of Vietnam.

Dear friends and fellow campaigners,
I wish you and your beloved ones a prosperous start into a happy, free and self-determined new year 2023.

There is still a lot of work ahead of us and our collective struggle against the technocratic agenda of the global elites is in full swing. But there is already a clear and important partial victory to declare:

Never before have people around the globe experienced and recognized with such clarity what it means to confront a common danger and to have a common goal in mind.

From Australia to Europe to Canada, from the USA to Brazil and South Africa to New Zealand: all over the world, citizens and whole peoples understand how their freedom, their fundamental rights and their self-determination are being taken away from them by obedient and puppet-like governments. Former freedoms and rights that are now to be transferred to supranational bodies such as the WHO, the UN or the WEF, according to the will of a globalist and fake elite. Bodies that are neither democratically legitimized by the peoples of this world, nor can be held politically accountable by the citizens.

Digital control, electronic health certificates, climate hysteria, destruction of prosperity through artificial energy shortage, deindustrialization and destruction of farms and agricultural businesses, destruction of the traditional family as a source of strength and the nucleus of every nation, aggressive LGBTQ propaganda for the deliberate destruction of children's souls and a natural gender identity, as well as the abolition of cash, the control of the media, the excessive regimentation of the Internet with the state spying on even the most private communication through data retention and chat controls, are to turn once free citizens into a disenfranchised, unresisting and completely controllable mass of disposal in the stranglehold of the globalist elites.

And yet I remain hopeful. Because a keen awareness of these dangers has now emerged around the world. Citizens, activists, and some politicians from various political spheres, from left to right, together have begun to build global, widespread, and effective networks to push back against the technocratic agenda of the global elites. Many peoples, many languages, sometimes tens of thousands of miles between us, but one single idea and one single common goal are what have already brought us together so closely that we now speak just one single language: It is the language of freedom and self-determination!

So I am looking forward to 2023 and wish you, dear readers, all the best in the new year!

Kind regards,

Yours, Christine Anderson,
